Have your say – on plans to transform Ellesmere Port Market

Transformation plans for Ellesmere Port Market will go on display from 2 – 12 November in the market and online. The plans will improve the appearance and thermal efficiency of the market hall, support market traders and help future-proof the Market for traders and customers for many more years to come.

The plans include a bold and modern facelift to the market exterior that includes new landscaping at the entrance whilst the enhanced flea market area will get a new entry linking to the outside space. Traders and residents have been involved in conversations over the past few months as the plans for the Market have been developed.

In addition to the existing stalls, new areas inside the market will be created to provide far more uses for the building. The flea market will be transformed into a flexible space for specialist markets and events providing the opportunity to run the area either as part of the wider market or run specific events outside of the market's current opening hours. In the main market the plans include a new youth area, enterprise/co-working area, improved dining space, plus new 'changing place' facilities for disabled customers and their carers.

Please comment in person or online via this link until 12 November; members of the project team will be available in the market on 2 and 9 November to answer questions and explain more about the plans.

Last chance to comment on Active Travel plans for walking, wheeling and cycling too until 2 November

More than 200 comments have been received so far and over 65 people have visited the display in the market. The survey only takes 5 minutes and can be found online via this link.
