Stakeholders: Pupils, Parents, Staff.

Equality analysis is a valuable tool to help embed equality into everything we do

While process is important, equality analysis is essentially about outcomes

Lack of evidence of discrimination is not evidence of a lack of discrimination

It is not acceptable to say that a policy is applied uniformly to all groups and is therefore fair and equal. Applying a policy or procedure consistently may result in differential outcomes for different groups.

For each of the areas below, an assessment needs to be made on whether the policy has a positive, negative or neutral impact, and brief details of why this decision was made and notes of any mitigation should be included. Where the impact is negative, this needs to be given a high, medium or low assessment. It is important to rate the impact of the policy based on the current situation (i.e. disregarding any actions planned to be carried out in future).

High impact – a significant potential impact, risk of exposure, history of complaints, no mitigating measures in place etc.

Medium impact –some potential impact exists, some mitigating measures are in place, poor evidence

Low impact – almost no relevancy to the process, e.g. an area that is very much legislation led and where the Council has very little discretion

	Neutral	Positive	Negative
Target group / area
Race and ethnicity (including Gypsies and Travellers; migrant workers, asylum seekers etc.)		The proposal will increase the range of choice available to these groups.
Disability (as defined by the Equality Act - a person has a disability if they have a physical or mental impairment that has a substantial and long-term adverse effect on their ability to carry out normal day-to-day activities)		Making mainstream schools larger and more accessible will improve options for disabled children.
Gender	There is no basis for believing that this proposal will have a gender specific impact.
Gender identity (gender reassignment)	There is no basis for believing that this proposal will have a specific impact on gender identity.
Religion and belief		An increase in the supply of primary school places in non-faith based schools potentially provides choice for those who do not wish their child to have a faith-based education and will in some instances remove pressure on places in faith-based schools helping to ensure that those who wish their child to have a faith-based education are able to have that preference met.

Sexual orientation (including heterosexual, lesbian, gay, bisexual)	There is no basis for believing that this proposal will have a specific impact in relation to sexual orientation.
Age (children and young people aged 0 – 24, adults aged 25 – 50, younger older people aged 51 – 75/80; older older people 81+. The age categories are for illustration only as overriding consideration should be given to needs)		Increasing provision in an area with an identified deficit of provision increases the likelihood of a child being able to access their educational entitlement in their local community.
Carers		Increasing provision in an area with an identified deficit of provision reduces the likelihood that parents and carers will have to make extended/multiple journeys to ensure their child(ren)'s attendance at school.
Rural communities		This school's catchment includes a rural area. Increasing provision increases the likelihood that children from the rural area will be able to access provision at their nearest school alongside other peers from that community.

Areas of deprivation		Expansion of this school provides children living in surrounding areas of deprivation with greater opportunity to access education in a 'Good' school.
Human rights	There are no known Human rights issues appertaining to this school or the community it serves.
Health and wellbeing (consider both the wider determinants of health such as education, housing, employment, environment, crime and transport, as well as the possible impacts on lifestyles and the effect there may be on health and care services)		Maximising the ability of children to attend their local school by ensuring it has sufficient capacity helps encourage social integration with the consequent health benefits this brings.
Procurement/partnership (if project due to be carried out by contractors/partners etc, identify steps taken to ensure equality compliance)	Not applicable
